REKON
PRODUCTIONS

Right now, there is a story that is undeniable. The tale of relentless and systematic racism that has spurred violence and propagated oppression. A population - a community – outraged into action.

As a business, ReKon struggled with how and if we should address the world around us. We have always cared about equality and representation. But this is about more than script notes, casting and hiring. This is about black lives. This is about black voices. This is about lending our thoughts, our actions, and our power to this threatened community.

We began as a group of individuals and have always been about our people. It is for our people we can no longer remain silent. It is for our black creatives, our black producers, our black crew, and our black talent that we must acknowledge, speak, and act.

To you, our black storytellers: we see you, we hear you and we are with you.

We believe in the power of story, to evoke feeling, inspire thought, and influence change.

We are living the power of this story, right now. Feelings are being evoked. Thoughts are being inspired. Change is being influenced. We will not remain silent. We will be actively and vocally anti-racist. We will listen. We will do more to help change.

We are part of the story.
We stand against racism.
